"Takigi Noh" Open-air Noh theatre at Kyoto Station Building

Experience Traditional Japanese Theatre — Welcome to the Solemn World of Noh —

Sept. 1 SUN 18:30-20:00 4F Muromachi Koji Square Free of Charge

The oldest style of Japanese theater still practiced today, tracing its origins back over six hundred years, noh is a highly stylized, ritualistic combination of narrative music and dance with actors donning rich costumes and masks to portray their roles.

Noh is usually performed on the stage inside, however, Noh also takes place at night on a stage set outdoors lit with torches called Takigi Noh (lit. noh by firelight) and only selected noh pieces are performed. This month, a special opportunity will make an appearance at the Kyoto Station Building: three special pieces will be performed at the Takigi Noh stage. Experience the solemn world of noh on the stage at the contemporary Kyoto Station Building.

*The event will not be cancelled in case of rain but will be cancelled if the weather is stormy.
